Instant Honey is a collection of warm, summer moments. These Sun-soaked images explore ordinary and unassuming places, often traversed by without much notice. Each photograph demonstrates that everyday sights can arouse wonder. Captured in and around Chicago's western suburbs, Instant Honey offers a refreshing look, giving well-deserved recognition that the Midwest contains an abundant supply of rich, striking features.

Thomas Jordan (B. 1992, Winfield, IL) is an American artist and photographer. He is a self-taught artist working primarily in the Midwest. His photography explores an emotional connection to the unassuming by capturing unique subjects and light. Thomas' work has been featured in numerous online and social platforms, including The New Yorker, On B0000000M, Feature Shoot, Humble Arts Foundation, Aint-Bad, and PHROOM.
