Dino Kuznik was born in Mali Losinj, Croatia, while his Slovenian parents were on a seaside vacation. First introduced to photography by his grandfather at a young age, he seriously began working as a student journalistic photographer, assistant, and retoucher while in college. He received his bachelor's degree from University in Ljubljana (GMT - Faculty of Natural Sciences and Engineering). He moved to the USA in 2013 for a graphic design position. While working as a graphic designer he doubled as a freelance photographer on the side and was producing personal work, mostly showcasing the American West. His work has been exhibited in Somerset House in London alongside SWPA shortlisted photographers and Martin Parr, Street Sans Frontières in Paris, Arles and Trieste, Change of Space Exhibition in Toronto and other group exhibitions in Ljubljana, Detroit, and New York. His photographs have been published in numerous publications online and in print, appearing in Lufthansa Magazine, Chapter Magazine, a zine On Vulnerability by Antihero Press, M-Mag, Observations in the Ordinary by Subjectively Objective, a zine Late Starting Dawn by Pomegranate Press and a self-published zine with Lena Hofman - Metamorphosis.

At the beginning of 2019, Dino started working as a full-time freelance photographer and focusing more of his time on personal projects.
